

Human Sciences Encounters in Phnom-Penh Researcher Profil

Pascale Hancart-Petit

Pascale Hancart Petit is a french anthropologist, Research Fellow at IRD (Institut de Recherche pour le Développement). She is the funder of the network HUMAN SCIENCES ENCOUNTERS IN PHNOM PENH. Her doctoral thesis in anthropology, conducted in partnership with the French Institute of Pondicherry, explored the social dimension of birth in South India. Since 2008, her research, conducted in collaboration with the Pasteur Institute of Cambodia, addresses issues related to the social construction and social production of family planning in the context of HIV. This research stands at the intersections of reproduction politics, global flows of medical technologies, and social form and outcomes of inequalities. <http://ird.academia.edu/PascaleHancartPetit/About>
